Borrowers may choose among three repayment options: immediate repayment, deferred principal payments or total deferment. Borrowers should consider immediate repayment or paying the accumulating interest while enrolled in-school or deferment status since interest will continue to accrue. Any accrued interest that is not paid will be capitalized (added to the principal balance) at the end of the deferment period.

FEDERAL STUDENT AID PROGRAMS

FAFSA

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is a form that is filled out annually by current and prospective university students (both undergraduate and graduate) - and sometimes their parents - to determine their eligibility for federal student aid (including grants, loans, and Federal Work-Study programs). In addition, most states and schools use information from the FAFSA to award non-federal aid. The form is available electronically at fafsa.ed.gov.

Federal Pell Grants

Federal Pell Grants currently range up to $5,550 for the 2012-2013 award year (July 1, 2012 to June 30, 2013) and are subject to federal budget appropriations. These grants are available to undergraduate students with exceptionally high need. These grants are not to be repaid.

Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants

These grants are available to undergraduate students based on need. Students may receive up to $4,000 per year. First preference is given to Pell-eligible applicants. Due to limited funding, most colleges award grants less than the maximum allowed. These grants are not to be repaid.

Federal Work-Study

Federal Work-Study is part-time campus work awarded to students based on need and is coordinated by the college. Earnings are at least minimum wage but may be more.

Students are paid at least monthly and earnings may be used to pay tuition or any other college-related expense. If you do not qualify for federal

Work-Study, a campus job may still be available. Contact your college financial aid office or your college's career services office for off campus job openings.

Federal Perkins Loans

The Federal Perkins Loan is a low-interest (5%) loan for students with exceptional financial need. The college is the lender, although the loan is funded by the federal government. The amount the student is eligible to borrow depends upon when the student applies, their actual financial need and the availability of funding at the chosen college. A grace period of nine months is provided when the borrower has been attending college at least half-time but has graduated, withdrawn or dropped below half-time enrollment status. For more details about these federal aid programs, visit studentaid.ed.gov.

STATE FINANCIAL AID PROGRAMS

State Grants

Some states provide educational grants to residents who demonstrate a significant financial need. State and federal grants are not repaid. To apply for this type of award, students typically need to complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). However, additional application guidelines may be required. To find out if your state offers educational assistance, contact your state higher education agency. Visit ed.gov to find out about financial aid options in your state.

Institutional Aid

Some colleges and universities may provide scholarships or grants based on merit or financial need. Check with your school's financial aid office or the placement office of your high school for more information.

TAX CREDITS FOR STUDENTS*

Tax Credits For Education

Tax credits are available for families who seek additional college financing options. Your family may benefit from one of these programs depending on your family's financial circumstances.

American Opportunity Tax Credit

This credit is available to students who are enrolled at least half-time in an eligible program leading to a degree or certificate program and who are completing the first four years of postsecondary education. In order to benefit from this credit, a family must file a tax return and owe taxes. Eligible taxpayers will be allowed to claim an American Opportunity Credit up to a maximum of $2,500 per tax year.

Lifetime Learning Tax Credit

The Lifetime Learning Tax Credit is available for college juniors, seniors, graduate and professional degree students enrolled at least half-time. Adult learners who return to college to begin a new career, trade or to enhance or upgrade their skills can benefit also. This tax credit applies to students who have exhausted their American Opportunity Tax Credit eligibility or students who do not qualify for the credit. Of course, an eligible taxpayer must file a return and owe taxes to qualify. The tax credit maximum limit is up to $2,000 per taxpayer return. Other eligibility requirements, including income restrictions, must be met to take advantage of these credits.

For more details about these educational tax credits, contact your income tax preparer or visit irs.gov.

Federal Direct Grad PLUS Loans are fixed rate loans available to graduate students. They may be borrowed in addition to the Stafford Loan.
